Core Value: Caring

I am a Christian. What does that mean? It means that I am striving to be Christ like. Many of us use the term Christian, but do we really know what it means to be a Christian? The core value of being a Christian is being able to Care. My name is Ethan Simmons and I am a Christian.

As I strive to be Christ like I feel that my most vibrant Core value as a person is Caring. I believe that caring for others is the best way that we can show God's Love, and at the same time change the world. I love sharing with others, because I know the great feeling that I have experienced when others have shared with me. My mother and father always told me to be aware of my surroundings and the people around me. They said allow your spirit to be sensitive to other persons needs and to be a blessing, because you never know when you will be in need. I remember there have been times when I didn't have lunch in school, but I always had a friend who was willing to share their lunch with me. When they shared their lunch with me it made me feel good inside and to know that there are people that still care. That is why I always make it a point to look around my classroom at lunch time to see who may not have any lunch and share with them. The Bible says that we should do unto others as you will have them do unto you. That is why I love caring for people.

I also love showing concern for others and helping them. I feel that you should always be willing to help someone if they need help. God has blessed each one of us with a gift, so if we can use that gift to help others that's a good thing. There have been times when I would help my parents with chores around the house, because I know that they work all week and may be tired. If I am able to help make their work easier, they feel better knowing that they don't have to work so hard. I have also helped classmates with school work if they may not understand. When I have helped them to understand, it makes me feel good to know that they can now be happy about doing well in their school work.

Caring for people is easy for me to do, because once you continue to practice something it becomes a habit, and then a way of life. So caring is my life. I thank God for giving me the ability to be able to care for others and to show his Love. When I care for others, it's passed on because people remember how they felt when someone cared for them, so they want others to feel the same way. So always remember that Caring is showing God's Love.
